THE STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE

Maria Clara Mejía Montoya (9°B)

It was a cloudy day. Brian was playing with his toys in the front door while his mom was watching him and at the same time sewing a blanket. They lived in a farm situated ten kilometers away from Kansas City. Brian was playing, when all of a sudden, a huge purple mysterious thing, crashed in their fields. The sound was so loud, Brian got really scared and he ran into his mother's arms, but she wasn't afraid, instead she was surprised by Brian's attitude. - "What's wrong my little boy?" asked his mother. - "Didn't you hear that?" said Brian loudly. His mom hadn't heard anything. She calmed Brian down and they went back to what they were doing.

At dinner, Brian was still thinking about the noise and he was wondering why his mother hadn't heard it.

Next day, his mother went early in the morning to town to buy some fruits but Brian stayed all by himself in the house. He tried to forget about what happened last night and went out to play with the dogs. After playing for a while, Brian went up to his room and lay down on his bed. Again all of a sudden, the noise sounded again but not as loud as the day before. Brian thought it was his imagination playing him a joke, so he just ignored it. In the afternoon, his mother finally came back and cooked a delicious dinner with rice and chicken, Brian's favorite.

Next morning, Brian milked the cows and took the fresh milk directly into the kitchen. He had already gotten used to being alone. His father had died four years ago in a car accident and he had no brothers or sisters. The fact made him realize how much he loved his mother, the only person he had lived with and loved.

When Brian was already in bed, the noise came back even more loudly than the last times. This time Brian knew it was real. He stood up and looked through the window but the darkness didn't allow him to see, not even a tree. Brian decided to face the noise that had been annoying him for days. He went downstairs and opened the door with his left hand and in his right hand he had a broomstick to protect himself. After being outside, he grabbed the flashlight that was hanging next to the door. He started walking through the tall grass; he was determined to find out where the sound was coming from. He walked like for five minutes when he heard a very low sound. He stopped moving and started looking around. With the help of the flashlight, he saw a piece of metal and a small red light which he touched with his finger and it started to get so loud that Brian's mom woke up and looked through the window. Brian was so amazed. He couldn't believe a spaceship had landed on his fields. The spaceship seemed to be broken but after a while it started spinning around. Brian's mom saw it and started screaming: -"Brian! Get over here right now!" But he couldn't hear her because of the loud noise. The spaceship wasn't the typical movie one. It was a squared platform with a small circle underneath.

His mom was terrified. She didn't know what to do and she saw a very strong light, which made her faint. When she woke up, she felt dizzy and started shouting his son's name all around the house. Her son had disappeared, and she couldn't sleep for weeks. Nobody knew what happened to Brian but she knew the spaceship took him away. Nobody believed her and she was considered crazy. Every night she looks at the sky and prays for her beloved son to come back.
