LUCKY

Manuela Toro Guerra (10^oB)

Putting in the VHS, “You will love this one, I promise” I tell her before pressing the play button as I join her back on the couch with the greatest smile. Each week we have a movie night and this week it was my turn to pick. “It doesn’t look like I will” she laughs in response. As the movie goes on, she tries to entertain herself but she can’t, “I hate action movies, I like the funny ones” she says.

She starts sinking into my warm side until she’s pressed up gently against me, curled up like a little ball, my hands stroke her cheek in slow movements.

Not long, her eyes close as she falls asleep. “You’re too cute” I comment after letting out a small chuckle. As I reach over to the side and grab a blanket, laying it carefully on top of her, I put one hand on her shoulder and my fingers circle her shoulder soothingly.

I turn off the TV, “What a pretty little angel I have. So perfect. How did I even become so lucky?” I think. “You’re my sweet sister. So tiny.” I whisper with a smile as I leave her be, gently playing with her hair which is the same color as mine. “So delicate. I swear I will protect you and I will always look after you no matter what” I whisper again as I place a soft warm kiss on her cheek and take her to bed.
